

Italian President Giorgio Napolitano Weighs in on MK-Ultra Gate

The scandal that's festering like a bad cavity is attracting more and more world leader attention.* The latest to contribute to the matter is one of the leaders of a government that's been a coalition partner since autumn 2008.

* World leaders who to date have weighed in on MK-Ultra Gate: French President Sarkozy on March 14th and Brazilian President Rousseff on March 19th

On October 13, 2008 a very geo-aggressive Italian Prime Minister Berlusconi appeared in public with President Bush and announced that if necessary his government would provide troops to help liberate Canada from Chinese joint governance and domestic authoritarianism. In light of the MK-Ultra Gate scandal the veracity of that offer is now suspect.

Italy's other connection to coalition issues is documented in Chinada Provokes Attendees at the July 2009 Italian-Hosted G8 Summit.

On March 29, 2011 the Italian President appeared on CNBC for a sit-down interview in which he (i) reaffirmed his government's coalition membership, (ii) acknowledged contract the Custodian has with his government and the other public sector partners, (iii) encourages all parties to "find a solution", (iv) restates the foreign policy position that unlawful Chinese interests in Canada must be expelled to adhere to what the international law of sovereignty dictates and (v) he and his colleagues will continue to work with European partners to achieve stated objectives.

President: Of course we have important relations with Libya, [1:09: Colbert M.] important agreements in the field of energy.

[...]

And we hope [2:58: Kernan M.] the situation will find a solution; I mean not going on in a stagnating way...

[...]

Maria: We're ten days into the mission. How long do you think this goes on and do you think that the international community should have been more aggressive in pushing Gaddafi out earlier?

President: [3:57: Colbert M.]

[...]

President: We want to manage together with the other [5:02: Powell-Colbert M.] European countries.

View video