Did White House Chinada Geo-Impotence Embolden Iran to Plan Terrorism Strikes on American Soil?

Talk is not only cheap it's dangerous to the interests and long term health of democracy, the rule of law, human rights and free market capitalism when done in the international relations arena where there are ideological battles with their opposite. And it's especially problematic for reformers who seek the aid of those committed to what the coalition pursues. On the fifth week anniversary of the "deal is done" communiqué America's three largest national television networks and two cable stations showed they were of the same mind - in full agreement - with the Canadian lawyer taking possession of his entitlements.

There are many serious consequences to the peace, security and prosperity of the 21st century because U.S. administrations have been ignoring, coddling or facilitating that which maintains Chinada's control of America's northern neighbour and Beijing with Ottawa's assistance insidiously and dominos-style spreading totalitarian political and corporate cultures throughout the world. The geo-impotence of two successive White Houses has gotten around through diplomatic channels and can't but lead rogue states like Iran to think they can strike the U.S. militarily or otherwise.

Iran said greater threat, while al-Qaida declines

WASHINGTON (AP) - Top U.S. intelligence officials on Tuesday asserted that Iran has the means to build a nuclear weapon but has not yet decided to follow through, in contrast to Israel's insistence that time is running out to stop Iran from developing such a weapon.

But Iran is likely to strike out at U.S. interests if it feels threatened, Director of National Intelligence James Clapper told the Senate Intelligence Committee in an annual report to Congress on threats facing America.

Citing last year's thwarted Iranian plot to kill the Saudi ambassador in the U.S., "some Iranian officials - probably including Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei ... are now more willing to conduct an attack in the United States in response to real or perceived U.S. actions that threaten the regime," Clapper said.

That it's been a year since the genesis of the MK-Ultra Gate scandal and still private sector partners, including America's Fourth Estate, haven't taken a really bold step against Obama et al. also demonstrates weakness. This circumstance is sure a far cry from the Reagan - Thatcher era which successfully battled what Chinada now represents.

Five weeks to the day after the quantum was said to be resolved - February 1st - involves another auspicious anniversary. It was on this day in 2006 President Bush made his deceit and manipulations even more nefarious. He and his co-colluders ordered live fire rounds to be directed at Canadian diplomatic in Baghdad's Green Zone to make the coalition think his administration was going to be tough on the Conservative government that had just been elected in Canada after thirteen years of Liberal rule. That it's six years later and there hasn't been one of what should have been many successive "concrete steps" to address Chinada belligerence leaves rogue states viewing the United States and its coalition allies as weak and indecisive.

There was a visible consensus on the quantum issue on that anniversary from morning 'till night. The Canadian awoke to the three main networks and two cable stations - all of whom were victims of White House impropriety - having attired cast members in that lexiconic color. Robin Roberts on ABC:

Anne Curry on NBC:

Erica Hill on CBS:

Suzanne Malveaux on CNN:

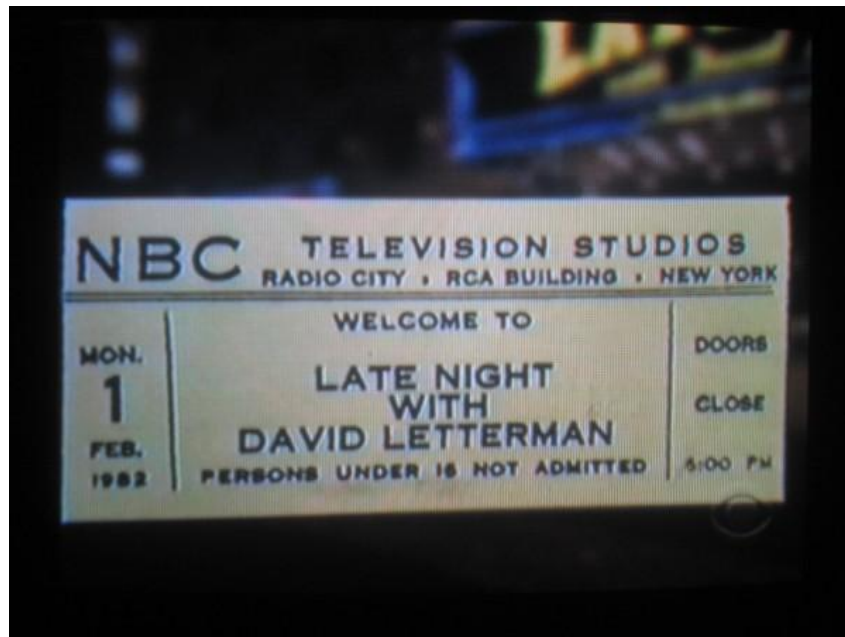

And Sue Harrah on CNBC:

That evening the same cross-channel unanimity. Chelsea Handler on E!, who employed a Cl-Z-J M. when asking her colleague what he's wearing to draw attention to the day's consensus:

David Letterman, who was celebrating the 30th anniversary of his show did more than wardrobe himself in the color of the day:

He scripted the Top Ten List to include two coalition-relevant items. Number Five highlighted the fact everything that's been done to advance the partners' reform and accountability initiative in the back-channel precluded face-to-face encounters with the Canadian. And Number Three fired a salvo of condemnation at the White House and its appointees for being “[geo-] incompetent”.

He also continued what he started the night before; namely using Brad Pitt as a quantum ratifier. On the eve of what might be called 'Green Day' he talked about how many times he's tried to get the Hollywood triple A-Lister on the program and was never successful. He jokingly offered him a hundred bucks plus cab fare to attend. He visualized the gesture by laying out five twenty dollar bills on his desk and then added another twenty to total $120. Then for the interview of his special guest, Howard Stern, he taped a sign to the front of his desk that read "Brad Pitt" to keep the comedic jab alive and to further demonstrate he, his producers and staff were dedicating the milestone in part to the Canadian.

Brad Pitt didn't show up on 'The Late Show', but instead agreed to appear on 'The Daily Show' and he chose to be there attired in quantum. He and the host executed B-Clinton M.s to draw attention to MK-Ultra Gate.

Meanwhile over on 'The Colbert Report', the host joined the quantum acknowledgement:

In between the morning and evening's ad idem CBS news producers delivered such a convincing two-part communiqué on the issue, it brought an end to doubts that emerged when more than a month passed after the Canadian was advised “the deal is done” and there were several follow-up confirmations but nothing to show for it. The first came at the start of the broadcast stating there’s going to be an end to the “mission”, referring to holding the White House to account by way of publicity. The second was during a segment in which an attendee at an Obama speech that day gestured with a recognized Maneuver. Scott’s scripted remarks were...

Tonight the Defense Secretary says [0:03: staffer: Thalia M.] the U.S. aims to end the combat mission in Afghanistan a year early. [...] [The President proposed] a new program to help millions who owe more than their homes are worth. They would get cheaper mortgages under the plan. It would cost $5 to 10 billion [11:50: attendee: George W M.]. The President wants to pay for it...

... which drew attention to what was conveyed during the State of the Union Address:

Also in the speech are indications the Canadian can expect twice what was originally agreed upon; the doubled portion being for what can only be concluded as "foreign aid" to help finance Canadian reform and accountability.

Extend the tuition tax credit we started that saves middle-class families thousands of dollars. And give more young people the chance to earn their way through college [28:34-38: Biden: Cowell M.] by doubling the number of work-study jobs in the next five years. [...] We've already announced over 500 reforms, and just a fraction of them will save business and citizens [44:19: Boehner: Prince Harry M.] more than $10 billion over the next five years.

As would be expected, the Chinada High Command was outraged at this development; still of the view it's entitled to enslave, experiment upon, torture and threaten people with death measured in decades. It mobilized the 'dirty cop' division of law enforcement to engage in its trademark arrogant belligerence. Upon return from his squash game that afternoon the Canadian had to run a police gauntlet set up right in front of his apartment building:

This particular vehicle was chosen because its license plate includes a Taylor Identifier:
